

 College of LawPrograms ▾ Find People ▾ Students ▾ Experiential Learning ▾ Career Office ▾ Alumni ▾ Research ▾ Give ▾News > Good news from One Bad Son

Good news from One Bad Son

Apr 17, 2013

Lawyer, drummer, and College of Law alumnus Kurt Dahl (LLB'05, LLM'09), may have left the prairies and moved to Vancouver with his rock band One Bad Son, but he's still brave enough to visit Saskatoon in the dead of winter. Last December, he and his band decided to spend three days on the outskirts of the city in frigid minus 35 degree temperatures to film the music video for Scarecrows, the second single from their self-titled album.

"It was the coldest thing we've done as a band," says Dahl. Friends, family and fans also braved the winter air to be included as extras in the band's first professional video. Dahl adds, "We all nearly froze to death, so all subsequent videos will be a breeze in comparison."

While most people wouldn't necessarily choose such harsh conditions as the setting for a rock music

 In The NewsThe Lawyers' Weekly: A dying man's short will has a long historyHoehn wins Saskatchewan Book Award for scholarly writingExperiential learning benefits students and communityLISTEN: The story of Cecil George Harris' tractor willReconciling Sovereignties shortlisted for Saskatchewan Book AwardU of S Western Canada Moot Team wins McIntyre CupPreston Manning speaks on video, Dahl says it was important to stay true to the song. “I’ve always felt like the song sounded like winter—that feeling of desolation that can come from a prairie winter. Saskatoon in December seemed like the perfect way to capture that feeling.”

The prairie charm of the song and video must have caught on – Scarecrows hit #5 on the rock charts across Canada after its release in September. The song (which was also written in Saskatoon) along with the rest of the album, can now be downloaded from the iTunes store online.

Dahl plans to build on the success of One Bad Son’s recent album and will soon be launching his own website, lawyerdrummer.com which will combine his two passions—music and the law. “My goal is for it to be the go-to site for all musicians and music industry professionals in Canada.” Dahl says he’ll be posting tons of legal advice, industry advice, career advice and other resources for musicians. “I feel like I can give back some knowledge that I’ve acquired over the last decade, on the music side and the legal side of things. Knowledge I would have loved to have when I started out on this journey.”

The creation of Dahl's new website won't be the first time he's mixed music and the law. Back when the band was just starting out and Dahl was a student at the College of Law, he thought it would be appropriate to use the legal term 'Force Majeure' for the name of one of their singles. “We had a song with no title, and I was reading about force majeure in contract law,” says Dahl. “It just sounded cool, and seemed to fit the 'bigness' of the song.”

So besides shooting music videos, touring, and launching a website, what’s next for Dahl? Perhaps writing a song about lawyers? He says he’ll see what he can do. “Maybe I'll try to work ‘nemo dat quod non habet’ into the next album.”

Dahl and One Bad Son will be in Saskatoon on Friday, April 19 for a performance at Bud's on Broadway.

See all tour dates.

Watch the video for Scarecrows on YouTube

"Politics, ethics and faith"

Queen Elizabeth II Diamond Jubilee Medal awarded to Associate Professor Doug Surtees

Students continue to thrive in negotiation

Professor Daum Shanks featured in The StarPhoenix

Roger Carter Scholarship recipients announced

Professor Beth Bilson recognized for support of United Way

Two law alumni honoured with 2012 Alumni Achievement Award

Chancellor Emeritus Tom Molloy (LLB '64) to receive Saskatchewan Order of Merit

College of Law establishes Estey Chair in Business Law

Professor Brent Cotter granted Fellowship in Legal Ethics and Professionalism Research

Provost's Grant awarded to

watch the video for Scarecrows on YouTube

Photo by Mark Maryanovich

Professor Sarah Buhler

Professor Hoehn releases new book "Reconciling Sovereignties"

First year law students participate in inaugural welcoming ceremony

Merasty family's academic success continues

Students earn bronze at international competition

New co-directors of Legal Research & Writing Program announced

College celebrates 2012 graduates

von Tigerstrom receives 2012 CALT Award

Innovation in learning

President MacKinnon awarded inaugural Prime Ministers of Canada Fellowship

Redford Elected Premier

Kawaskimhon National Moot

Experts discuss access to justice

Newman earns new researcher award

First-year law students honoured

Graduate students welcomed with luncheon

Convocation reception recognizes achievement

 Archived News Items

Site Map Contact Disclaimer Privacy

© University of Saskatchewan